

too far by telling him every mistake of my brothers while they were working. I was young and immature. I could not see that the few minutes of happiness that I felt when I looked better than my brothers and their bad behavior that I didn't realize how terrible it made them feel. I realized too late that my brothers had grown to hate me so much that they wanted me away from our family and our father. They must have been very angry with our father Jacob, because they let him believe that wild animals had eaten me. This broke his heart very much and must have been their revenge for the way father and I made them feel. The other mistake I made was telling my brothers of the dream I had that showed me becoming the leader of our family. I was very excited about the meaning of this dream but I can understand that the brothers who despised me would not want me to be in charge of them. Perhaps, if I had not done these things, my brothers would have wanted me to stay with the family.

Anyone who reads this "Will" and my story must think that I was very bitter towards my brothers for selling me into slavery. Actually, I was not angry and I did not want to punish them. That is not my nature to seek out revenge. I have learned along the journey of my life that a good and worthy person behaves in a way that God would approve no matter what the situation is. I am a strong person and I always knew that each hard time in my life was a test of my abilities. Instead of punishing my brothers, I decided to test their strength of character. I wanted to know if they had changed, if they had they matured in all these years I have been gone. I proved myself to God everyday and now I wanted my brothers to prove that they were worthy of my love. To test them, I put on a disguise and pretended to be a
